

Cal State San Marcos – Kellogg Library Computer Lab

A CASE STUDY

WHO

The five-story, 200,000-square-foot Kellogg Library originally opened in Spring 2004. In addition to library collections, services and staff, the building houses academic computing offices, the Barahona Center for the Study of Books in Spanish for Children and Adolescents, the Student Computer Help Desk, the Faculty Center, the Learning Assistance Program, a Technology Resource Center, video recording studios and edit rooms, a 100-seat open computer lab, four 60-seat classrooms, one 80-seat classroom, the campus satellite copy center, and Starbucks coffee shop. The library is one of the largest in the CSU system.

PROJECT OVERVIEW

Students are learning differently in regards to posture and space. Although this is a Computer Lab for focused work, the furniture refresh allows students to choose how they focus and study. Learning in a standard desk setting, having the ability to stand and work on the computer or more of a lounge position utilizing the Steelcase Brody WorkLounge.

A CASE STUDY

ISSUES ADDRESSED:

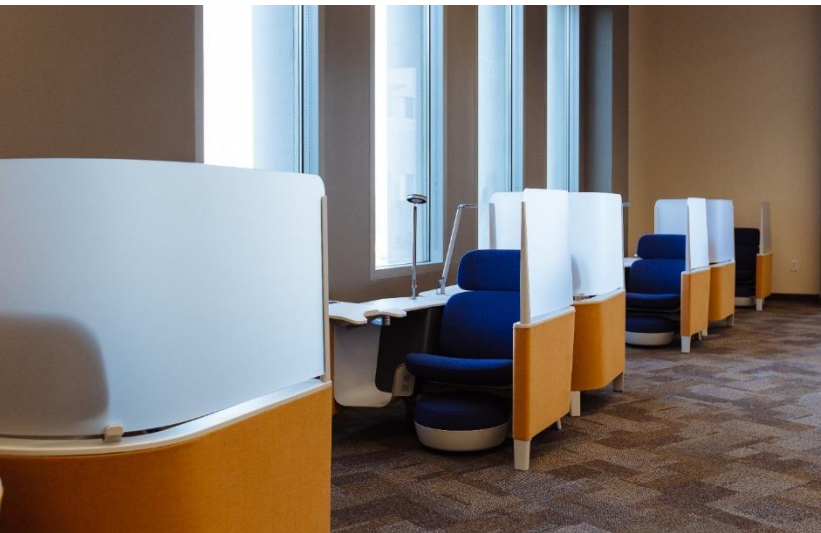

Our goal was to be able to fit more workstations in the same footprint while creating spaces that gave students the ability to collaborate.

The original computer lab was under utilized by students at the university. The Library Team envisioned a space where the students would want to come and work as well as have control in how they work.

Incorporating the Steelcase Brody WorkLounge as well as a few height adjustable desks will allow for students to choose their posture and privacy preferences when studying and collaborating.

A CASE STUDY

ISSUES ADDRESSED:

The Library Team wanted this space to stand out. They wanted this space to be a go to destination for student learning and engagement.

SPECS

Steelcase Touchdown Study Workstations – Serpentine, Straight and Height Adjustable worksurfaces

Steelcase Brody WorkLounge

Steelcase Buoy

SERVICES PROVIDED

Space Planning

Finish Selection

Furniture

CREATIVE PARTNERS

Furniture Vendors: Steelcase

